

LORIMER UNSEATED AFTER MOST SENSATIONAL TRIAL, BY SENATE'S VOTE TODAY

ILLINOIS MAN LOSSES SEAT AFTER MAKING BITTER ATTACK UPON THE LEADERS IN A PASSIONATE ADDRESS.

THE VOTE WAS 55 TO 28

Found Guilty by His Colleagues of Having Been Elected to Office Through Use of Money—End of Long Sensational Case That Has Disrupted Republican Party.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, D. C., July 13.—By a vote of 55 to 28 the Senate of the United States today decided that William Lorimer obtained his seat in that body through corrupt means. The end has come to one of the longest and most sensational trials to unseat a Senator on one side and to retain his seat on the part of the accused on the other.

It has been of more than two years' duration, the first trial in the Senate resulting in the holding of the seat by the accused after testimony had been taken both in Chicago and Washington.

Senator William Lorimer.

Then came the second trial with accusations on both sides of fraud and deception, and hours of oral debate on the floor of the Senate.

For the past two days the result has been foreshadowed and the vote was not unexpected. Lorimer has vigorously defended himself and bitterly assailed his enemies, respecting no person however high or low, whom he thought had opposed him.

Almost the first utterance of the Illinois Senator today was a renewal of the challenge to Senator Kern and his associates to refute certain of Lorimer's statements as to the evidence brought out by the investigation.

Again the deft brought no response. Senator Kern was the center of a short conference when he came on the floor and one of the participants being Senator Luke Lea another minority member of the investigating committee and a target for Lorimer's shafts in the two days of his speech.

The opponents of Senator Lorimer practically had agreed not to answer his charges and challenges believing that to open a discussion would involve the issue in further debate.

The final vote was upon the resolution offered by Luke Lea from Tennessee, declaring the Lorimer election by the Illinois legislature in 1909 invalid.

The adoption of the Lea resolution carried with it the senate's verdict that "corrupt methods and practices were employed in the election of Wm. Lorimer" making his election invalid.

The closing moments of the trial were intensely dramatic. Lorimer holding the floor making a last defense of his election declared he did not appeal for the vote of any senator but asked for justice.

Senator Lorimer when the vote was announced walked slowly toward the back of the room and passed into a cloak room. Senator Reed Smoot throwing an arm over his shoulder.

In his closing sentences he expressed gratitude for tributes which senators had paid to his private life. "Every man who has such a life has his own reward—he has it here," he said. "I ask nothing on that account; I have no hearing in the case. I hope it will influence no senator in making up his judgment."

He spoke of his family "I have been the happiest of men living and blest by God's sons he said. I ask nothing because of them or because of my ideal home life. When senators are making up their minds when they believe Lorimer or Chas. A. White, all I ask is to consider in connection with a record of 40 years my truth and veracity as stated. By my enemies I ask the consideration of senators as to whether they will believe the bribe taker who has lied time and again or believe me."

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

London, July 13.—The Imperial Conference of Teachers' Association, which was formally opened in London today under the auspices of the League of the Empire, adds one more to the series of important gatherings that have been held during the past few years with a view to knitting more closely together the various units of the British Empire. All of these gatherings have been held since 1901, in which year the League of the Empire was formed to promote co-operation among the countries and colonies of the Empire, mainly in affairs connected with education and to inspire personal and active interest in the great problems connected with the Empire's condition and progress. Many delegates have arrived to attend the conference of teachers. STATE HAS FAWNS TO SELL AT NOMINAL COST

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., July 13.—The state of Wisconsin has in stock ten beautiful fawns, fresh from northern Wisconsin forests, which it will sell for the best price obtainable. The latter may buy them if they choose, the state asking $10 together with fifty cents for registration. Some fawns bring from $15 to $25 each. They are much sought as zoo attractions or pets. The law forbids the taking of "venison" out of season, and fawns are classed in this designation.

ORDERS REDUCTIONS IN LIGHTING RATES

Rate Commission Takes Favorable Action on Complaints From Sheboygan and Rhinelanders.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Madison, July 13.—In decisions announced by the railroad commission reductions and adjustments were ordered in the lighting rates of Rhineland and Sheboygan and the Wausau Paper mills company succeeded in its contention to compel the St. Paul road to reduce its rate on ground wood pulp from Rothschild to Brokaw from three to two cents per 100 pounds and secured a refund of $300. One of the important points decided in the case of J. C. Myer against the Sheboygan Gas Light Co., for lower rates was that the commission did not allow the company a "going value" on the plant. The company asked for a going value of $45,000. The commission ordered new rates of $1.20 for the first 1,000 feet of gas used a net rate of $1 on the next 4,000 feet and a net rate of .85 cents on all gas used in excess of 5000 cubic feet.

SPAIN WARNED THAT BORDER NEUTRALITY MUST BE ENFORCED

England and France Reported to Have Sent Note Warning Spain to Respect Republic and Enforce Neutrality on Frontier.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Lisbon, Portugal, July 13.—According to a Portuguese newspaper "The Patz," Spain has received a collective note from England and France pointing out that principle of international law which obliged Spain to respect the republic of Portugal and to enforce neutrality on the frontier. Senor Augusto Vas Concellos, the Portuguese premier, had an interview today with Sir Arthur Henry Hardinge, the British minister to Portugal in the course of which he protested against Spain permitting armed Portuguese royalists to encamp on Spanish territory. Wholesale arrests of royalist conspirators have been effected at Ballas, in the province of Estramadura about eleven miles to the northwest of Lisbon, where the rebels had cut the telegraph wires and had planned to seize the batteries of the fortress of Queluz, owing to the republican troops having discovered a score of guns and dynamite and a quantity of women's divided skirts with which the conspirators had intended to disguise themselves. Further disorders occurred in the town of Casimira about 18 miles south of Lisbon on the Atlantic coast where royalist sympathizers are collected.

The letter of Chairman Graham to the association did not ask for the appointment of a sub-committee, but said: "The sub-committee feels that under the circumstances the bar of Seattle and King county owe the profession as well as congress and the committee the duty of protecting all material evidence pertaining to the matter of inquiry, that were made to give the true facts concerning Judge Hanford's fitness to remain on the bench."

BATTLESHIP WYOMING SOON TO BE TRIED

Will be Eighth Vessel of Dreadnought Type in Atlantic Fleet—Destined to be Flagship.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, D. C., July 13.—According to present plans the new 26,000-ton dreadnought Wyoming, the great all-big-gun battleship that is destined to be the flagship of the United States Atlantic Fleet, will put to sea to undergo her official trials. Her sister ship, the Arkansas, has already had her preliminary trials, and, steaming over the Rockland, Me., course, averaged a speed of over 21 knots an hour, which exceeds by a knot the speed called for in her builders' contract. The naval experts who have followed the construction of the Wyoming believe that she also will more than fulfill all of the requirements of her contract.

The addition of the Arkansas and Wyoming will make eight vessels of the dreadnought type in the Atlantic Fleet. These vessels carry a total of eighty guns of the 12-inch type, every one of which can be fired simultaneously in either the starboard or port broad side. The total displacement of the Atlantic Fleet dreadnoughts when the Arkansas and Wyoming are added will be 167,650 tons. To man these eight dreadnoughts, 7,348 officers and men will be required.

WISCONSIN SWEEP BY VERY SEVERE STORM

ALMOST A CYCLONE ALONG THE LAKE SHORE—DAMAGE DONE WAS CONSIDERABLE

LIVES LOST AT KENOSHA

Storm Then Jumps Lake Michigan and Hits at Grand Rapids With Perhaps Fatal Results for Many.

Kenosha, Wis., July 13.—One woman is dead and many people are injured as result of a cyclone which swept through the suburbs of the city of Kenosha just after 3 this morning. The storm was the most severe known in this section of the state in many years. Houses were blown down, trees uprooted, barns collapsed and crops ruined by the forces of the storm.

Mrs. E. Printz, of South Kenosha was killed by the shock of the storm. Mrs. Printz was about to become a mother when the cyclone struck and she died from the shock.

The home of Captain O. Nelson at South Kenosha was demolished and Nelson found buried in the debris an hour later. He was unconscious.

Many other people had minor injuries but none of them are regarded as serious. Telephone and telegraph connections in the stricken district are cut off.

It is said the path of the cyclone was little over a half mile in width and in this territory everything practically was ruined. It is impossible to estimate the loss as only partial reports of the damage have been received.

In Kenosha the storm was very severe, but it did not attain the velocity of a cyclone. The Hotel Jacobs was struck by lightning. There was a panic among the guests who fled in their night clothing, but no one was seriously hurt.

At Oshkosh.

Oshkosh, July 13.—A severe electrical storm which broke over Winnebago county about midnight put out of commission 400 telephones in the city of Oshkosh and wire companies in general suffered today. It is believed the fierce downpour of rain accompanying the electrical display prevented fires in general.

The rain caused some damage to standing grains by beating down oats, and barley appearing to suffer most. Truck farms and gardens while needing rain suffered some minor losses in the beating down of tomatoes, onions, early corn and other produce. It was one of the most spectacular storms of the year.

At Racine.

Racine, July 13.—A terrific electric storm hovering over Racine and vicinity early this morning almost reached cyclone proportions and reports coming in from sections throughout Racine and Kenosha counties indicate a deluge of rain amounting to a cloudburst.

The tracks of the St. Paul railway were washed out at Russell, Kenosha county, necessitating the abandonment of freight traffic and the running of passenger trains over the lines of the C. & N. W. via Corlies.

In Racine considerable damage was done by lightning along the lake front followed by a small tidal wave at 9:30 this morning, the water running up to a distance of several hundred yards and rising a number of feet in the river and then receding to one foot lower than the normal stage.

At Marshfield.

Marshfield, July 14.—As a result of the heavy rain storm of last night a washout 150 by 25 feet occurred one mile south of Merrillan, on the new line of the Omaha road at Wright station. Several barns were blown down and bridges and culverts washed out.

INTERESTING NEWS OF BROTHER JOSEPH

WRITES THE GAZETTE FROM LEPER SETTLEMENT AT MOLOKAI.

TELLS OF MANY THINGS

Gives Brief Description of Judge Lyon's Home in California—Sends Views of Site of Ft. Ruger.

In the following letter written to The Gazette, Brother Joseph Dutton, the Janesville man who is head of the Leper settlement at Kalawao on the island of Molokai, in the Hawaiian group, tells of many things of interest to Janesville people. His letter is as follows:

Leper Settlement, Kalawao, Molokai, Hawaii, May 27, 1912.

Your package has been for months and months standing at "attention" in the front line consisting of letters that have to be answered "immediately if not sooner," as the boys say—about fifty in that front line all the time. Does not include strictly business letters. They are answered at once.

With your paper coming daily, and your pleasant mention occasionally, to Judge Lyon, ninety years old; Wm. P. Lyon, Jr., E. A. Hayes (congressman) and wife, (Miss Clara Lyon) and J. O. Hayes, live in one of the finest residences on the California coast with sixty-five acres of magnificent grounds. Hollister made some snapshots there and has sent several to me. I have been telling him about some of the uses I intend making of them. One bit of ground shows Col. Lyon from the waist up. I have placed this in the package of Comrade A. G. Weissert, Post Commander-in-chief of G. A. R. He was a member of Col. Lyon's company in the 8th Wisconsin, for Judge Lyon was captain in that regiment before promotion as colonel to the 13th. Comrade Weissert of Milwaukee has presented me with one of the bronze medals, Denver, 1905. His package is here. I am waiting my opportunity to tell of an incident relating to General Good, concerning the Nashville raid. In one of the engagements Comrade Weissert was wounded. The "incident" occurred at Decatur, Ala., where Hood first struck our lines. It was quickly done and had great and lasting results.

But I was going to tell you of one other snapshot of Col. Lyon, by Hollister, full length, a fine little picture. It is just now in Honolulu. Hollister loaned it to Hon. W. C. Smith, who always felt an interest in Judge Lyon, from my accounts, and I got for him of Judge Lyon an extra copy of Mrs. Lyon's book, "Reminiscences of the Civil War." When the picture comes back I intend sending it to you. In the Gazette it would be interesting to many people to see Colonel Lyon at have arranged so 5.30 will do this time.

6:45, May 28. The morning "chores" and mass are of the past. May finish this before "coffee." I forgot to mention the false alarm about my being a leper. Several papers having items about it were sent, but yours was the first received. You helped to correct by what you learned from the B. of L. report, and later by the Mid-Pacific. A letter came from Father Wynne, N. Y., saying he could not imagine how anything he said should be taken as printed, and they (encyclopedia people) wished to know quickly if there was any ground for it at all. So I called it correct.

In the matter of a leprosy cure I might have added that our Dr. J. T. Wayson of the Kahili receiving station, near Honolulu, has there several fresh cases, not far advanced. I believe, that are apparently cured—now. The doctor, though, makes no claims, as yet—at least as applied to leprosy. Practically, it's a freezing of nodes or of tubercles.

This is ever so much more than I intended at first. But if it is of any satisfaction, or use (possibly, some parts) I'm not sorry, and wish for you and all friends the greatest possible blessings.

Most sincerely,
JOSEPH DUTTON.

ANSWERS INQUIRY AS TO THE STATE LAWS

Explanation of the Ruling Relative to Roosevelt Ticket in Wisconsin.

To the Editor: Will you kindly explain more in detail the statement in last evening's Gazette relative to Roosevelt not being able to have his electors placed on the Wisconsin ballot this fall.

A REPUBLICAN.

The Roosevelt or the "Bull Moose" party will not get on the Wisconsin ballot, or at least will have a difficult time trying to get on, is shown by the laws governing the case where the organization has not complied with Section 11-29 of the general election laws.

The Roosevelt supporters will have to get 1,000 signatures and then petition for a place on the ballot. They will also have to run as an independent party. The law also provides that each nomination paper shall be appended with the affidavit of a qualified elector stating that he is personally acquainted with all of the electors on the paper.

Roosevelt received much less than 1,000 votes at the recent presidential primary.

Section 30 of the statutes provides: "1.—Independent, or nonpartisan nominations may be made for any office to be voted for at any general, judicial, special, or city election.

"2.—Such nominations shall be made by nomination papers, containing the name of the candidate, the office for which he is nominated, his business or vocation, residence, post-office address, and except as otherwise provided by law the party or principle he represents, if any, expressed in not more than five words.

"3.—To each separate nomination paper shall be appended the affidavit of a qualified elector to the effect that he is personally acquainted with all the persons who have signed the foregoing nomination paper, that they are electors and that their residence, post office address and date of signing are truly stated therein. But such affidavit shall not be made by the candidate named therein.

"4.—Such nomination papers shall be signed, if for a candidate to be voted for throughout the state, by at least one thousand voters thereof; if for a candidate to be voted for throughout a county, district, or other division less than the state, or within a city or ward, by at least three hundred voters thereof; and if for a candidate to be voted for in a precinct, by at least one hundred voters thereof.

"5.—Each voter shall sign for but one candidate for the same office, and shall add his residence, post-office address and the date of signing."

According to an opinion of the attorney general, rendered September 21, 1908, it appears that presidential electors may be nominated under Section 30, and that the voter may vote for all electors by making a cross at the head of the ticket the same as voting a straight party ticket. According to another opinion rendered Oct. 17, 1908, it appears that the state officers and the electors at large may be nominated by the same nomination paper providing said paper complies with the law.

WESTERN HENLEY MAY BE A POSSIBILITY

Plan to Make Races Between Wisconsin Crews a Yearly Event in Near Future.

Janesville boat enthusiasts will be delighted to know the interest in rowing in Wisconsin which has been maintained for years only through the annual visit of the University of Wisconsin crew to the Foughkeapsie, N. Y. regatta, may have a chance to be better developed, if plans under consideration at Carroll college develop. President W. O. Carrier has engaged Leon C. Rice, a former Syracuse university oarsman, and football player, as coach of the Carroll athletic teams to begin his duties this fall, and it is now possible that a rowing department will be established.

Carroll has an attendance of enough students to give it the highest rank among Wisconsin colleges, only losing first place in track athletics the last spring through the quarantining of its star athletes by a wandering case of smallpox in Waukesha, and its football team was the surprise of the year in Wisconsin in 1911. The securing of a rowing coach makes an entrance into aquatic sports as Waukesha beach, on Pewaukee Lake, is only a short electric car ride from the college grounds.

Coach Rice is a student of the great Ten Eyck, for so many years coach at Syracuse, and was a member of four winning Syracuse crews. He was also one of the leading football men of the east, being known in his final year as the greatest half back in the east.

The plan to start an aquatic department at Carroll, if carried out, will be linked with the project to establish a western Henley regatta at some Wisconsin Point, on the Madison lakes, or near Prairie du Chien, on the broad stretches of either the Mississippi or Wisconsin, where the two rivers join.

WILL SOON SELECT A CITY TREASURER

City Council Expects to Name One Before End of Month—Will Not Be Figurehead Officer.

Before the end of the month the City Council expects to elect a City Treasurer to succeed Mayor James A. Fathers, who bond for that office expired July 1. Up to that time he had exercised the necessary signatorial powers, Miss Elsie Fathers, Deputy City Treasurer, assuming the ordinary duties of the office. Although she has had an extended experience and is well qualified for the place, she is ineligible to election as treasurer, because the law requires that such officer shall be an elector.

There have been no lack of applicants for the position. The Council is exacting in its requirements and wants not a figurehead but a working officer, well qualified to handle the city's money. The treasurer will be required to furnish a bond of $50,000. At this time of the year the duties of the treasurer are very light.

Extenuating Circumstance.

Ted was an excitable youngster, and to adequately express his feelings had acquired the use of words forceful, but improper. In a fit of temper one day he used some of his most violent terms to his mother. She said nothing, but Ted knew well the signs of preparation for a just rebuke, corporally administered. He said, "I know you are going to whip me, but before you begin remember I said it in a very pleasant tone of voice."

BASEBALL NOTES.

The Philadelphia National League Club has purchased Pitcher John Ritter, of the East Liverpool A and P League team.

The Pittsburgh Pirates and Chicago Cubs have been putting up a fancy struggle for second position in the National League race.

Manager Frank Isbell, formerly of the White Sox, has his Des Moines team well up in the Western League race and running strong.

July 4, 1912 will be remembered by New York bugs. The Giants lost two games to Brooklyn and the Highlanders dropped two to Washington.

Hugh Jennings' "Big" is still on the taboogan and Detroit fans claim that the team has joined Eva Tanguay's "I Don't Care" brigade.

New names appear in the Highlanders' line-up nearly every day. It is only a question of time until Frank Farrel will have an entirely new crew of tossers.

Managerial duties must have taken the kick out of Jimmy Callahan's bat. The White Sox pilot is not hitting up to his last season's mark.

Now, that he has got his war club working in Providence, Hank Henry threatens to do some of the heavy hitting that made him famous last season.

Pitcher George Bell, who used to twirl for the Brooklyn Dodgers, is pitching winning ball for Joe McGinnity's Newark team, in the International League.

Roger Bresnahan ought to ask for a Carnegie medal to be presented to Johnny Kling, the life saver. The Braves have stood between the Cardinals and the pit all season.

When "Hub" Perdue was reinstated by the Boston Braves he was unable to pitch on account of having no uniform. "Hub" became so sore when he was suspended that he tore up his uniform and threw his glove in the air.

Broke Forty-Six Out of Fifty Targets At Practice Shoot, Despite Fact Bad Wind Was Blowing.

C. E. Snyder was high gun of the Janesville gun club at a weekly practice shoot held at half past two o'clock yesterday. He broke forty-six out of a possible 50 birds, which was a splendid record, considering the fact that a bad wind was blowing, which made the shooting difficult. Next Thursday six or seven of the members of the local club will go to Madison to take part in a tournament to be held there. Yesterday's scores were as follows:

C. E. Snyder	50	46

J. Gage	50	30

JANESVILLE PIRATES WILL PLAY DOUBLE-HEADER GAMES.

After a two weeks' lay-off with no games, the Janesville Pirates are planning to come back strong with a doubleheader tomorrow afternoon at Athletic Park. In the first game the Pirates team will hook up with the Harmony team which the Pirates blanked by a 6 to 0 score. Harmony, however, is determined to reverse the tables and make the piratical crew walk the plank. In the second match the Pirates will compete with one of the fastest nines in Beloit, the Cubs, who gave the Pirates their one and only beating this year. Whether the Cubs can repeat their former performance, or will lose and make it an even break, remains to be seen. The game will undoubtedly be one of the best this season. Ryan will be on the mound for the Pirates in the first game, and Buggs will hold down the slab for them in the second contest. The others of the squad will be: Lerner, c; Kelly, ss; Muenchow, 1b; Sullivan, 2b; Klusky, 3b; Berger, 1f; Kressin, cf; Falter, rf; Manthei, sub.

THIRTY BOY SCOUTS AT PERMANENT CAMP

Storm Last Night Did Not Dampen Their Ardor for Real Roughing It Under Able Direction.

Captain Hans Jaekle and his Boy Scouts are now permanently encamped at Chautauqua grounds and thirty of them slept, or tried to sleep, there last night. While the tents stood up the boys had some exciting experience in keeping their bedding and clothes dry when the storm broke out and threatened to drown them all out.

Today the camp, has been transformed into a corps of engineers and the tents are all properly trenched, in the most approved manner and ready to meet any emergency that may arise from climate changes. As it was it was not bad but the Scouts had to stand up for the most of the time and keep their blankets clear of the ground to keep them dry.

Captain Jaekle, runs the camp with strict discipline at the same time teaching the boys to be self reliant and useful. He has a daily routine of regular camp work, teaching them how to keep the place sanitary and clean and care for their bedding and themselves. The outdoor oven gives them experience in roughing it that could not be obtained if the boys had a first class cook stove to experiment on.

Short hikes will be indulged in from now on, the boys leaving the camp and returning to it at night. Signal stations will be established and practice given in Wig Wag work and also in other of the Scout manual lessons. The boys will also be taught to swim and closely watched while bathing.

The nearness to the city, with all its wildness, makes it an ideal camping spot and many of the members of the order who are employed down town plan to report each evening for the night around, the camp fire. Members of the Scout Commission also plan to devote some time to the camp and Dr. Buckmaster and others will give the boys short talks during the period of the outing.

The boys are much interested in the camp experiment and obey the calls for duty in orderly manner. It is most excellent discipline for the members at the same time instructing them in the out door life that is not taught in books and making them self reliant and helpful.

During the next week or ten days the commissioners will make a personal appeal to local business and professional men for larger donations that the camp may be continued through August as originally planned. Between two and three hundred dollars will have to be raised to make this a possibility and it is expected it will be subscribed.

WITH THE BOXERS.

Leo Houck, the Lancaster middleweight, is on a trip to Yellowstone Park with his two sisters.

Joe Jeanette will take on both Jeff Madden and Mickey McDonough in six-round bout at New Bedford, July 26.

In Fred Storback, the South African heavyweight, Tom O'Hourke believes he has a "hope" that can defeat Al Palzer.

Jack Harrison, who recently won the middleweight championship of England, is coming to America this Fall with Jem Driscoll.

Ultimately Reach the Goal.

"Two hearts that beat as one" may jangle sometimes, not because they are actually hostile, but just because they lose step. It makes awkward marching when you are out of step with your comrade, but you both keep on in the same direction and with the same purpose, all the time.

LUBRICATION

The Essence of Successful Motor Manipulation

In discussing the many phases of indisposition peculiar to the automobile, probably the matter of LUBRICATION, or rather the lack of it, is responsible for more REAL, UNADULTERATED, DR. WILEYED, FANCY, GROUND and LOFTY expostulations and other explosions, upon the part of the unsuspecting owner, than any one of the other many idiosyncrasies of an "oughto."

Taking it by and large, the owner need not of necessity know a blamed thing about his machine other than to know how to "crank" it without breaking his arm and keeping in his head the phone number of the nearest garage.

But back to the subject so dear to our old friend, John D.

Every owner should bear in mind that keeping the cups (oil cups) well filled will relieve him of many an anxious inactive moment.

Reminds us of some men who are in a business that has been known to run smoothly but for some unaccountable reason sticks, bucks and refuses to proceed in its usual velvety groove. Said business man can't for a minute understand, and never for an instant does he suspect that little "Lubrication" would help a whole lot.

Moral: A smooth running Business Engine is possible when The Gazette brand of lubricant is applied.

ATTENDED GAME WADENS' EXAMINATION AT MADISON.

William Mason, Warden for Rock County, Reports Successful Meeting—To Protect Birds.

William Mason, game warden for Rock county, has returned from Madison where he attended the examination for the game wardens of the state. The wardens were obliged to take a physical, oral, and written examination. Those who pass the examination will be in line for promotion. Sixty-six wardens were present, attendance being compulsory. The wardens were addressed by the governor and also given a lecture on birds by a university professor. A concerted effort is to be made by the state wardens to protect the harmless wild birds and boys with air rifles will have to cease molesting them or subject themselves to penalty.

By remembering—

To keep your domestic troubles inside the family.

That a "quarrel" should be made up as soon as possible.

By remembering that married life is a full, not a limited, partnership.

That your partner is neither hero nor heroine, scamp nor cherub.

That marriage is for better or for worse—especially for the latter.

By remembering to be patient and kind, slow to anger and plenteous in charity.

To dress for one another a little and not entirely for society.

To be scant in the use of "dear" and "darling" in public, but plenteous in private.

By remembering that a soft answer turneth away wrath and grievous words stir up anger.

That the woman who saves money is as useful to the partnership and as deserving as the man who makes it.

That a good husband is worth more than millions of money and a good wife is above rubles.

That confidence, thoughtfulness and faithfulness in one partner beget like virtues in the other.

By remembering that love believeth all things, beareth all things, hopeth all things.

That love is not puffed up, becometh itself not unseemly, suffereth long and is kind.

That the human heart craves fellowship, ship and comradeship and sympathy, always and everywhere.

That it is easy to see the mote in your partner's eye and to forget the beam that may be in your own eye.

That your partner will meet you halfway. And, if not, go a little farther, for it is worth while.

By remembering to be as agreeable (if possible) as in the sweet old days of courtship.

That you can afford to make many sacrifices for the sake of harmony and right relations.

And by remembering—

That the happiness of more than one is bound up in the articles of copartnership and that you cannot afford to dissolve the partnership on any less reason than actual treason to the firm.

THINKS SITUATION ON BORDER GRAVE

Gov. Colquitt.

That the situation on the Mexican border is one of increasing gravity is the opinion of Gov. Colquitt, of Texas. He has issued orders withdrawing the state militia from the maneuvers at Alexandria, Va., and the troops are being rushed to the Mexican border.

Feminine Philosophy.

Lady Mary Wortley Montagu wrote from Venice at the age of sixty-eight: "It is eleven years since I have seen my figure in a glass; the last reflection I saw there was so disagreeable I resolved to spare myself such mortification for the future, and shall continue this resolution to my life's end. To indulge all pleasing amusements and avoid all images that give disgust is, in my opinion, the best method to attain or confirm health."

Poley Kidney Pills are healing, strengthening and tonic, and contain no harmful or habit forming drugs. N. J. Gorham, Cashier Bank of Woodville, Woodville, Ga., recently had an acute attack of kidney trouble. "The pains in my back and kidneys were terrible, but I bought a bottle of Poley Kidney Pills and took them, and can truthfully say they have entirely relieved me. I find more benefit from them than from any other kidney medicine I have ever taken." Try them. Refuse any substitute. Badger Drug Co.

More Fire Engines. The city of Racine is considering the advisability of purchasing two modern steam fire engines and a committee of three aldermen will be appointed by the mayor and fire chief to inspect several different makes of modern fire steamers and make a full report to the city council.

Mayor Goodland is in favor of purchasing two fire steamers as he thinks that a manufacturing city of the size of Racine should have ample fire protection.

One of the new steamers will be placed at the Central station and the other in the heart of the Junction factory district at the fire station on Sixteenth street.

Have Any of The Bell Telephone Missionaries Called Upon You to urge you to throw out your Rock County Telephone and replace it with a Bell instrument? If so, did they tell you the main reason they want you to change was for the purpose of killing competition in Janesville and bring back the Bell monopoly with its poor service and high rates? For more than a year a small army of those "FRIENDS OF THE PEOPLE" (?) have been visiting our subscribers and from the argument they put up one might be led to think their sole object in life was to benefit the public. Do they succeed in their efforts? Nay, nay Pauline! The Rock County Telephone list grows right along, just as it always has, nor have we ever employed solicitors either. No one can fool the people all of the time.

Look over the supplement of our directory which has just been distributed and you will see how we grow.

But we have learned to hurry carefully—to give the quickest service and at the same time not to forget that Big Store service must be the best service. An Absolutely Safe Method to Keep Eggs Fresh

Can you find a place where fresh eggs are not in the greatest demand in winter? No! Well then, if there is a demand, here is a method that will give you fresh eggs, at any time of the year, at a price that will warrant you a good profit.

Garantel Eggs are best for both Home Use and Selling Purposes. Garantel is imported from Germany, comes in powder form and is sold in original sealed packages only.

It keeps eggs fresh a whole year, is sanitary, cheap, and simple to use and does not coat or discolor the eggs. The powder is dissolved in water and the fresh eggs are put into the solution. Any kind of vessel may be used, although we recommend as most satisfactory, earthenware jars and cement basins. Vessels will hold 2½ Dozen eggs to every gallon. Eggs are to be kept in cool place, any ordinary cellar under 60 degrees will suffice, and where they are protected from frost in winter. Use fresh and sound eggs only. Eggs laid in March, April and May give best results, but eggs can be preserved successfully at any time with Garantel, if they are really fresh. 1 25c package will put up 120 eggs. Also a 50c size.

LIGHTNING AND WIND MAKE WIRE TROUBLE

Heavy Thunderstorm Which Visited City and Vicinity This Morning Did Considerable Damage.

Heavy rain, a boon to growing crops, fell in this city and vicinity early this morning. It was accompanied by a high wind and a brilliant electrical display which did considerable damage to telephone, telegraph, and electric light wires, and raised havoc with the city fire alarm system. Through the burning out or breaking of a high tension feed wire between Rockford and Rockton, the interurban car which is due here at 6:40 a. m., did not reach Janesville until 9:15, and the other morning cars were correspondingly late. The first car left Beloit on time but was stalled at Yost park for two hours and thirty-five minutes through the temporary failure of power. A large limb was blown across the trolley wire on South Main street but did not interfere with the service.

Circuit breakers on the wires of the Janesville Electric company blew out repeatedly and in quick succession, interrupting the lighting service, but no damage was done to the lines. The storm put the fire alarm system out of commission for a short time, and Chief Klein was out from 1:00 until 5:30 o'clock locating trouble and making repairs, taking up the work again later in the day. Several coils were burned out, and the alarm was sounded several times.

The Rock County and Wisconsin Telephone companies report that the damage done to their lines was much less than had been anticipated. A few wires were blown out and a few wires torn down. The American Telegraph and Telephone company had eight or ten lines crippled by trouble at Milton Junction, and the Wisconsin company also had some trouble there.

A large amount of water fell. The Yost park fire at Fulton rose from ten inches below the crest of the dam to about the same height above, and the water has begun to flow over the dam at Indian Ford. In this city the river came up from eight and one-half inches below the government mark to two inches below. Hill side streets were washed badly in some instances and Superintendent of streets Millmore and his men were busy most of the day making repairs and removing broken limbs that encumbered the streets and walks. The oiled streets showed almost no signs of washing. The home of E. Haskins, 805 Milwaukee avenue, was struck by lightning, the current coming down the chimney at the rear of the house to the roof, and escaping to the ground down the eave trough. Little damage was done, only a few shingles being torn from the roof. In the downtown section it rained so hard that it forced in underneath the plate glass windows.

Lightning followed a wire into the Hough Shade company's factory and started a fire but it was quickly detected by the night watchman who extinguished it with no trouble. No damage was done.

SCHEDULE UPSET BY WASHOUTS ON ROAD

Morning Trains on C. & N. W. From St. Paul and Duluth Run Via Milwaukee Instead of Through This City.

Because of washouts in the northern and western parts of the state, Trains No. 502, 512, 506, 510 on the Northwestern railroad, through passenger trains from St. Paul and Duluth to Chicago, arriving here between the hours of 4:20 and 9:30 o'clock in the morning, did not pass through Janesville today, it being impossible to run them this way. Instead they were sent over the new air line route across the northern part of the state to Milwaukee, and were run from Milwaukee to Chicago. The washouts occurred north and west of Elroy on the Omaha line, and it was therefore impossible to run them this way. Local service between Elroy and Chicago, through this city, however, was not affected.

But little trouble was occasioned the train service into this city on the St. Paul railroad today, although some of the morning trains were delayed slightly, being run slower on account of the softness of the track, due to the heavy rains.

PERMANENT FLOOR MAY BE PLACED ON BRIDGE

Board of Public Works Made Inspection of Milwaukee Street Structure to Determine Feasibility.

With a view to constructing a permanent deck or floor on the Milwaukee street bridge if the plan is found feasible, the Board of Public Works, consisting of Mayor Fathers, Councilmen Cummings and Millmore, and City Engineer Kerch, this afternoon made an inspection of that structure. The state of preservation of the piles was examined and a careful investigation will be made before action is taken. It is thought that the piles are able to bear the weight of a concrete floor and brick pavement. The present plank floor will soon need replacement.

BIG ATTENDANCE AT CONVENTION FRIDAY

Over Two Hundred School Board Members At Convention Yesterday—Will Meet Again Next July.

Over two hundred members of school boards in Rock County and over three hundred visitors in all, attended the meeting of the Rock county school board convention at the high school building yesterday. This is the largest attendance the convention has ever had, and in point of numbers exceeded the expectations of County Superintendent, O. D. Antisdel, who had charge of it. In many ways the meeting was a most helpful one, and a large number of subjects were discussed. The next convention will be held the early part of the month next year at the call of the county superintendent. Some of the school board members desired to have the convention held at a different date, but when the matter was put to a vote, the majority ruled to hold it in July.

TO HAVE CORINTHIAN LIGHTS ON STREETS

Oshkosh May Adopt System For Business Section of Its Main Streets—Plan Of Installation.

As the result of a conference held Tuesday afternoon by the Mayor and councilmen, officials of the Oshkosh Gas Light Company and representatives of the Oshkosh Retail Merchants' association, it is practically assured that the Corinthian system of lighting will be adopted for Main streets from Church street to the bridge.

Figures were submitted by the Gas Light company showing the approximate cost to the city for such system of lighting compared to the cost of the present system and the difference was not so great as to preclude the city from consenting to its adoption. The increased cost of the Corinthian system was estimated at about $450 a year and this will be more than offset, it is claimed, by much better and more attractive illumination of the street. No other expense to the city will be incurred by the change system, the merchants and other business men interested having proposed to stand the expense of setting up the poles and otherwise installing the necessary equipment.

There will be forty or forty-two such poles or pillars, each bearing a cluster of five lights set up along the section of Main street noted. These cluster lights will be so arranged that the top light of each can be left burning for any length of time after the other lights in the cluster have been cut off for the night.

Each top light will have a power of sixty Watts and the others will have a power of forty Watts each. According to a tentative schedule, all of the five lights in each cluster will burn each night until midnight and the top light will burn every night from dusk until dawn. The poles or pillars will be set at a distance of about 100 feet apart on each side of the street.

Miss Harriet Grimm to Speak From Automobile at Corn Exchange at Milton Yesterday.

Addresses on woman's suffrage will be given at the Corn Exchange square at eight o'clock this evening by Miss Harriet Grimm and Miss Baum, who have been making an automobile speaking tour of Rock County for the Political Equality League. At Milton they were entertained by Mrs. Ralph Richardson, who gave a dinner in their honor. The meetings met with the same good attention and manifestation as those earlier in the week.

A woman's suffrage meeting will be held at Library Hall on Monday, July 15, at eight o'clock. Reports of the progress of work in this city and county will be given. It is not planned to do much work in August, and this will be the important meeting for the summer. A large attendance is desired.

MANITOWOC MAY PURCHASE ELECTRIC LIGHTING PLANT

Manitowoc, Wis., July 13.—To lead off what he says is a probable merger, by purchase of the gas and electric light plants of the city, Mayor Stolze, acting for the city administration, has inaugurated a plan for the purchase of the plant of the Manitowoc Electric Lighting Co. A resolution introduced into the council last night, provides of submission of the question of purchase to a special vote in connection with the general election on November 5. The stumbling block in the way of the city is said to be that Manitowoc, which recently purchased its water works plant, and issued $230,000 bonds, is within a very small margin of the bond debt limit and some plan must be devised to provide for payment in the event the election is carried.

SERIOUSLY INJURED; FELL DOWN STAIRS

Mrs. Anna Nolan, Aged 75, Had Right Shoulder and Right Hip Broken by Fall Down Cellar Stairs.

Mrs. Anna Nolan, 402 Lincoln street, had her right shoulderbone and right hip broken last evening when she fell down the cellar stairs at her home. Mrs. Nolan returned home last evening and entered her residence from the porch, intending to step into her bedroom nearby. In the darkness she opened the wrong door, choosing the cellar door rather than the bedroom door, and pitched headlong down the stairs. Mrs. Nolan is about seventy-five years of age, and because of her advanced age her injuries are very severe.

NO PRICE CHANGES ON LOCAL MARKET TODAY.

There was no changes in prices this morning and the market remained the same as it was yesterday. There are some very fine California cherries on the market this morning and they are not very high in price. Strawberries which have been so very good this season are almost all gone and the last are on the market today and they took a very sudden increase in price.

The raspberries which came on the market a few days ago are getting very plentiful and are also of an excellent quality. The prices of today's market are as follows:

Reminiscences of the Siege of Vicksburg By Col. W. B. Britton

Forty-nine years ago, in the issue of the Janesville Daily Gazette of Thursday, July 16, 1863, a letter from the late Col. W. B. Britton, written just after the fall of Vicksburg, which occurred July 4, 1863, was published. Col. Britton was at that time a major in the army, being later promoted to the position of lieutenant-colonel commanding the Eighth regiment, and at a later date, colonel by brevet. He went out from Janesville with the Eighth Regiment as captain of Company G of that organization, the regiment famous in Civil War annals as the "live eagle" or "Old Abe Regiment," which had as its mascot a live eagle. He died in this city a few years ago. His letter to the Gazette, written on the day of the surrender following a long siege, is given below:

From the "Live Eagle Regiment," Headquarters Eighth Reg't. W. V. Young's Point, July 4, 1863.

Editors Gazette:—

Today is the anniversary of our nation's birthday, and hereafter it will be doubly celebrated by the soldiers of this army. July 4, 1863, Vicksburg, the great stronghold of the rebels in the west, with its garrison of 25,000 men, all its heavy ordnance, and not less than 30,000 stand of small arms, camp and garrison equipment for 30,000, surrendered, giving us undisputed navigation of the Mississippi river. Port Hudson must fall at once, for many thousand men can be spared from here now. If wanted, to co-operate with Gen. Banks.

I suppose with you, today, everything seems alive. Among us even, while all are rejoicing over our victories, there seems to be a joll, after 46 days and nights of cannonading and bombardment. Today all the guns seem to be at rest from their labors. They have not spoken, except at noon, when a national salute was fired from the fleet, and from some of the principal forts around here. We have received no order from Gen. Grant yet concerning the surrender, so I cannot give you the conditions. The number of prisoners may vary from the figures I give you, but that is the number we understand that surrendered. I think all will be paroled here, the officers allowed to wear their side arms.

I have just come from picket duty and sharpshooting, from the point opposite Vicksburg, with four companies of the 8th Wisconsin, and one section of Taylor's Chicago battery. We had a bully time down there driving the rebels from the river, keeping them from getting water, and to prevent them from crossing, should they attempt to escape this way. My men kept up conversation with most of them most of the time. One of my men asked them what they thought of U. S. Grant. They said, "he would do pretty well to keep a corral." When they would fire one of their big guns at us, they would sing out, "Jay down, Yankees, that's one of our guns." Our mortars all shelled over our heads and when one of the balls would start our men would sing out, "get in your holes, Rebs, that's a Yankee pill, they are poison to you all." A flag of truce came over and wished to land. I informed them that they must communicate with Gen. Grant in the rear; I could not allow a flag to land on that point. We had been troubling them considerably during the day, and as on other occasions they thought, I suppose, it would be a good chance to use a white flag to ascertain our strength at the point, but I could not safely show up my four little companies on that occasion. To make sure of being received at the point, and to create sympathy, they had a lady accompanying them in the boat. But it was no use; they have abused the white flag too often, and consequently they were ordered off. On their return to Vicksburg, all the big guns seemed to get mad at us, and opened on us with great fury, trying to shell us out; but we would not be shelled, although shells burst so near us that the heat of the powder burned our faces. Capt. Smith, of Co. B, says one solid shot struck in the levee in front of him "that moved his pit two feet to the rear."

We relieved the 11th Missouri of our brigade. They met with a severe loss. Col. Weber was killed while on duty at the point by being struck on the head with a piece of shell from one of the enemy's guns. His place cannot well be filled in the brigade. The country has lost the service of one of its noblest defenders, the 2d brigade one of its bravest and most accomplished officers. All mourn his loss. When we first became acquainted with Col. Weber he was a Captain in the 11th Missouri; afterwards he was promoted to major, then to lieutenant colonel, and lately to colonel. He was a young man of fine moral and temperate habits, and beloved by all who knew him. His remains were sent to Springfield, Illinois.

Col. Robbins was seriously injured a few nights since by his horse falling on him. He went north, today, on the steamer Dickey; also Gen. Mower sick with a fever. Col. Jefferson is on detached service, and consequently I am at present in command. Co. A is detailed to work a battery of guns here. Captain Greene is military inspector of the district of Northern Louisiana, on Gen. Dennis' staff (pretty good place to be these times); Captain Young is chief of engineers on Gen. Tuttle's staff; Lieut. Eillings, division quartermaster on Gen. Tuttle's staff; Lieutenant Sprague, assistant adjutant general on Gen. Mower's staff; Lieutenant Woodworth, aide de camp to Gen. Mower. So you see that the 8th is pretty well represented on staff duty in this department. Since you heard from us last we have had another sharp fight out at Richmond, Louisiana, capturing 40 prisoners, killing and wounding several and driving the enemy in confusion from the town. We burned the town and bridges on the bayous. Our casualties were six men wounded. The women and children were brought to Young's Point.

We have a great deal of sickness here now; 130 men are unfit for duty, today, in our regiment. Capt. King is unwell; Lieut. Sargent well and fat; Doty complains a little, but he will come out all right after a little. Henry and Frank Whittier stands the climate well. We are having green corn and ripe peaches here now. It is very hot weather, plenty of mosquitos, no ice, warm Mississippi water; lots of such luxuries, but we can stand more than that. It is not half what some of our copperhead friends will receive from the soldiers when they make a raid up that way. We will turn mosquitos in scorpions, and the warm water will be boiling. The soldiers have a great liking for copperheads, and if they ever have a chance they will pay their respects to all such people. When you get the news from here you must celebrate all of you. Vicksburg is taken sure. (We did that thing, major, in good style.)

I told you some time ago we had them, but you were all afraid we would not hold them. Now we have them, and 60,000 men are far beyond the Black river after Joe Johnston. General Sherman is bound to make him fight now or never. You are all alarmed about Lee up in Pennsylvania. We down here think it a first rate thing. We just wish all the southern army was up in Illinois and if they ever get back they would be welcome to go. Now if our eastern men take hold of the thing right Lee will never get out whole. I think if this party was down there now we would confuse the rebs so that they would not know the road they traveled north. We think Lee's movements will be as good to us as 100,000 men. We don't worry a particle about it. It will wake up some of the sleepy heads. They want a few raids up that way; you don't know what was is. When you all find out and see the effects of it you will all go. The south knows what war is and consequently they are all engaged in it, and when all the north gets in there will not a day's work for all hands to do. That's the way to finish the war. Go it, Lee! Wake them up.

July 6th.—I have just returned from the city. I learn that we have 27,000 prisoners in all, 70,000 stand of small arms, 100 pieces of artillery in the rear not counting the guns on the river, ammunition by the hundreds of tons, seven locomotives and many cars, all surrendered in good order, not a gun spiked. They had several 11-inch guns on the river—we have them all.

I also learn that our troops occupy Jackson again, and that General Sherman has captured 5,000 prisoners. One steamboat load just came down the Yazoo river. I heard General Grant say today he thought Port Hudson would surrender this day. He also told a steamboat captain he should start him with his boat for New Orleans tomorrow morning. We will soon have cars running to Jackson now, and if you don't hear from Joe Johnston and all his army are either killed or captured then we don't know how to do it. There is now not much more for us to capture out here. The ordinance and ordinance store we have taken from them in this campaign can never be replaced by the rebs. We captured some splendid Whitworth guns here, manufactured in Manchester, England. The object of the western army is accomplished. The Mississippi river is open; but the great object of all is to beat them everywhere; force them to surrender unconditionally. If we have now sufficient day light in the west, send us to the east. We are willing to help take Richmond, Charleston, Savannah and the South generally. In short we are ready and willing to do what our generals order us. We would even come up in Wisconsin, if we were ordered there, to fight copperheads and traitors and enforce law and order everywhere. "Them's our sentiments."

Norway's Water Power.

According to recent reports, the amount of water power which is in the way of preparation in Norway is 500,000 horsepower in addition to the existing 430,000 horse-power. Many large projects for the hydraulic work upon the large streams have been the subject of franchise granted during the last few years, and such work is now about finished. The hydraulic work on Mjosen is completed, and another enterprise on the Samnanger stream is soon to give the city of Bergen a large amount of electric current.

Pie Sufficed for Large Party.

Over 90 persons partook, the other day at Gorleston, Suffolk, England, of a gigantic sea-pie, into the making of which there entered two sows of flour, six rabbits; six ox and sheep kidneys, 28 pounds of beefsteak, two score of green vegetables, half a stone of onions, and two stone of turnips and carrots. The total weight of the pie was over two hundred pounds, and it took two days to cook.

She left five bright, handsome daughters. Mr. O'Connor brought them all to Chicago and took the responsibility of raising them. He says he couldn't get along without the children.

DESIGN NO. 63

A mistake many people make is to place a house whose room arrangement might please their fancy, but pay no attention to location and environment, building a tall slim house on a terraced lot or a low cottage on a flat lot or between other high buildings, or a small house on a large, deep lot. Here is a plan that will make a very cozy home, if built on a shallow terraced lot, either inlot or corner, when not surrounded with large houses.

The arrangement is unique, the stairway being placed at the rear of the long Living Room. The cellar-way leading from the Kitchen, underneath. The Living Room is entered from a Portico in front, while a side Porch extends the entire length of the building, with an entrance to Living Room near stairway. Opposite this entrance is the door to the Kitchen which is provided with sink and cupboard. The rear door opens on a lattice porch makes a good place for a refrigerator, door of porch being provided with a lock, a double-acting door connects the Kitchen with the Dining Room which is large enough for the ordinary family. The Dining Room is connected with the Living Room by a cased opening. On the second floor is 3 chambers and Bath Room, all of good size and opening from hall at head of stairs, each provided with closet. Finish in L. R. and D. R. Golden Oak, balance Yellow Pine.

Widths 28 ft. 4 in., length 22 ft.

HEART AND HOME TALKS

BY BARBARA BOYD

The Girl Who Sentences Her Mother

MOST girls love their mother. Yet how many girls pause to think that because of their own actions, the world is passing judgment upon their mothers?

Yet this is something a girl should think about, especially at this season when she has perhaps unusual independence because she is free of the restraint of school either temporarily or altogether; because she may be on a visit and away from motherly oversight; or because she is just starting her social or business career, and thinks now she is her own mistress. Any of these conditions is apt to go a little to her head. She thinks she fills the whole horizon, and she feels perfectly equal to shouldering any criticism that may fall upon her.

But she should remember that in the background stands her mother; in nine cases out of ten, a patient, loving mother who has labored through many years and at much self sacrifice to bring her daughter up to be a sweet, gracious, lovable woman. And in nine cases out of ten, if the girl conducts herself in such a way as to arouse criticism, this criticism will fall more heavily upon her mother than upon herself. Before the world she is the embodiment of her mother's training. She is her mother's representative. And if she falls down in little things or big things, many there are who will say, "She hasn't had the right training."

Now when a girl gives occasion for such criticism, is it fair to her mother? The thoughtless girl doesn't think of this side of the matter. She loves her mother. She would do anything in the world for her, so she says. And undoubtedly she would, in tangible things. She would nurse her, she would work for her. But she isn't careful of those little things of conduct that make the mother feel repaid for all her years of "cleat, self-sacrificing training. She doesn't remember that this world will look beyond her to the mother who has brought her up and will judge that mother by the daughter's defects or accomplishments.

The mother who hears her daughter praised for her sweetness, her graciousness, her thoughtfulness, her charming manners must feel well repaid for all the labor she has put into the building of her daughter's character.

On the other hand, what must be the heart desolation of the mother who has labored just as hard, but sees in her daughter only loudness, flippancy, selfishness, ungraciousness.

This is a point for the girl who loves her mother to think upon. She is representing her mother. Is she representing her truly or is she slandering her?

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

DANGEROUS ATMOSPHERES.

A WISE young school ma'am recently refused the opportunity to lodge in one of the finest houses in the town in which she taught.

The opportunity came to her in this way: The house was owned by a young couple who were very well-to-do. The husband's business kept him away much of the time and the wife was lonely. She didn't exactly want a hired companion, and having met and admired the young school teacher, conceived the idea of offering her a room in her beautiful home at a most reasonable rate, feeling sure that she would jump at the opportunity.

The school teacher thanked her graciously but, much to everyone's surprise, declined the offer. Her friends were astonished. "Have you seen the house?" they questioned.

She had.

"And that beautiful front bedroom with the wonderful mahogany furniture, and the bay window and the rugs? My dear, they say those rugs cost at least a hundred dollars apiece."

She had seen all that.

"And yet, you are going to stay at Mrs. S's, where you sleep in a white iron bed and have oak furniture and cheap rugs. Will you tell us why? Don't you like Mrs. R?" (the wealthy young woman).

"Of course I do," retorted the school ma'am, "and I know the house is lovely, and I appreciate the things in it just as much as you do. It's simply because it's too lovely that I don't want to live in it. I'm afraid of the atmosphere."

"What do I mean by that? Just what I say. I'm afraid of the atmosphere. Mrs. R. has all the money she wants, and all the things I love; she dresses beautifully, and she sets a standard that I couldn't live up to. I would probably try, and I'd spend more money than I ought, and be discontented in the end. If I stay where I am I will be with my own kind of people, and I won't be tempted to spend more than I should, and I think that I'll be happier in the end."

Don't you think the little school ma'am emphatically deserves the adjective I gave her in the first line?

I do.

Contentment is one of the greatest factors of happiness. Indeed it is more than that; it is another name for happiness. And there is nothing on earth so dangerous to contentment as being too much with people who have a great deal more of this world's goods than you.

People with different incomes have totally different standards. What one class regards as a luxury another considers a necessity. To get the standard of a financial class above your own, to accept its definition of necessities, is to lay up a store of discontent and unhappiness for yourself.

Of course some of your friends will have more than you. That is to be expected—just as some will have less—but if you don't want to open the door to discontent, let the backbone of your acquaintanceship be your own kind of people.

CAPTAIN ROSTRON OF THE RESCUE SHIP CARPATHIA REMEMBERED BY SHOW GIRLS WHO PRESENT HIM WITH BLACK CAT AS MASCOT

Captain Arthur H. Rostron, the mascot and girls who presented it. Captain Arthur H. Rostron, of the rescue ship Carpathia, was given an enthusiastic welcome by New Yorkers when he visited their city recently. Nothing was too good for the captain of the ship that had rescued the survivors of the Titanic wreck. Captain Rostron made his first public appearance at the Winter Garden on Memorial Day. He was recognized by the audience and there occurred one of the most remarkable demonstrations ever witnessed in that theatre. Members of the company then conceived the idea of presenting him with a mascot. Accordingly, a pure black cat was secured and presented to the commander by two pretty members of the company just before he sailed from New York. The cat was named "Captain" and will occupy luxurious quarters in the skipper's cabin.

HELPFUL HINTS.

When canning strawberries one may have the delicious red berry keep its color and flavor if carefully put up as follows: Fill the cans with the fresh fruit. Have ready a rich sirup of sugar and water and any broken berries to give it color. Fill the cans with the holling sirup and then put into a boiler of boiling hot water deep enough to cover at least four inches over the top. Cover with a rug or carpet and let stand twenty-four hours or longer, when they are removed, wiped dry and put away for winter use. Putting the cans into the boiling water is easily done with a long-handled skimmer; set the can on it and steady it as it goes under the water.

The nice part of this canning method is that the fruit may all be put into jars ready, and when the boiler and sirup is ready a few minutes will finish the work, which is finished by the hot water. Fruit a year old that was canned by this method cannot be told from the fresh cooked berry.

One may sit out in a cool garden or porch and get a dozen cans of berries ready for the next morning's canning.

If you want a delicious dish of baked beans use less pork, and an hour before they are to be served add a cup of rich thick sweet cream to the pot.

A delicious sandwich for the porch supper or picnic lunch is made of cream cheese, a little cream and chopped green pepper spread between buttered bread.

Cleaning Fluid.—This is a fluid one need not fear to use on the most delicate fabric: Shave thinly a ten-cent bar of white castile soap and add a quart of boiling water. When cold add a half pint of ammonia, a pint of water; mix and cork tightly. Use on spots or stains with equal parts of water unless badly soiled, using a piece of cloth like the goods with which to apply it. This will clean any thing from furniture and rugs to delicate dresses.

JULY 13

IF TOMORROW IS YOUR BIRTH DAY

Too many social events may seriously interfere with your prospects, especially if you are in employ. For those who use discretion good fortune and romance is indicated.

Those born Sunday, July 14, will be fond of travel, especially on the water. They will be fond of public projects and many will become highly honored.

HER GEMS ARE TALK OF LONDON TOWN

Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury.

Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, wife of the well-known Philadelphia banker, is a very much talked of person in old London just now; or, rather, her gems are much talked of.

She has a marvelous collection of diamonds, all of them of the finest water and many of them of incomparable beauty. London first saw them at the recent court when Mrs. Stotesbury was presented to the king and queen at Buckingham Palace, and since then their fame has grown, so that "Mrs. Stotesbury's diamonds" has become a current phrase in conversations of which feminine adornments form the topic.

ENJOYMENT OF FOOD.

"A most interested reader" wishes to know "how I could live on fifteen cents a day for food, if I eat all the articles I recommend—eggs, butter and milk, at 60 cents a dozen, 60 cents a pound and 10 cents a quart, respectively." I haven't eaten fifty cents worth of these in five years, not because I have any objection to any of them, but because they do not furnish what I want for nutrition in the best form. As to the pleasure of eating a great variety of unnecessary and injurious foods and drinks, there is as much pleasure in eating a piece of dry bread as in the most elaborate course-dinner, when the appetite becomes normal. When this statement was questioned by a member of a large audience a few years ago, an old soldier confirmed it by saying that he had once enjoyed a meal of hard tack better than anything before or since. I have had as much experience with course dinners as the average reader and I am speaking from experience.

Cream is the best form of fat, olive oil is better than butter, but I believe that I can produce fat from whole wheat better than I can digest gravy or butter with other foods. I have educated my pampered appetite till I can now enjoy the food that is best for me better than I formerly enjoyed the ordinary meals.

JANESVILLE YOUNG MAN HAS SECURED CONTROL OF MINE

Aloysius Norton, Formerly of This City, Has Bought Controlling Interest in Mine Opened Up By His Father.

(By W. W. Watt.)
Reno, Nevada, July 10.—Among eastern men to invest their money in the mining game in this part of the far west is Aloysius Norton, a former well known Janesville boy who was engaged in the dry goods business in the Bower City on River street prior to his departure for Reno. For the past two months Mr. Norton has made the metropolis of Reno his headquarters all the time being busily engaged in acquiring the controlling interest in what appears to be valuable property located just over the Nevada state line in California on claims known as the Bonnie Hydraulic Mine in Plumas county, California.
Years ago Mr. Norton's father opened up this gold producing property and but a short time ago was obliged to give up active work on account of failing health. The property was leased and worked by a Boston syndicate who were associated with a number of mining men who still make Reno their home. Not being satisfied with the way business affairs were being conducted Mr. Norton quietly made his way out here from Janesville and by clever business methods has now secured control and has left Reno and is now on the property living in a cabin where he is directly the work which daily requires the services of a good sized crew. After reaching Reno Mr. Norton secured the services of one of the leading legal firms and soon he took up costly notes in one of the local banks. A meeting of the local stockholders was then called and Mr. Norton was elected as president and treasurer. But to accomplish this has cost the former Bower City resident considerable cash and if he pulls out of this mining venture right side up

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

How Martin Brushman of Wrightstown, Wis., Escaped the Surgeon's Knife.

Dear Dr. Goddard:—
In regard to my rupture which you cured two years ago, I am getting along fine; it does not bother me in the least and does not show the least bit. I am as good as I ever was, and it is two years last January since I took your treatment. I thank you ever so much and I would advise everyone who has a rupture to see you before some one else for they can save lots of trouble and expense.
Yours truly,
MARTIN BUSHMAN,
Wrightstown, Wis.
Such proof cannot be manufactured or imitated, and no man can offer stronger evidence of his ability and honesty than the written words of those he has cured. If you want to prove this statement write to Mr. Bushman. Perhaps you know him, if so ask him.
Notice I refer you to people right here in this state, not miles away.
80 per cent of all ruptures can be cured without operation.
If you cannot be cured without an operation I will frankly tell you so, but the chances are eight to two that you can be cured without pain, without losing a day's time from your work, and without half the ordinary operating expenses, and without leaving home.
Send for my little book on "Treatment Without Operation." It is free for the asking, and then come and see me at the Myers Hotel, Janesville, Tuesday, July 16. Consultation free.
Dr. Goddard has been ESPECIALLY SUCCESSFUL in treating Chronic Appendicitis, WITHOUT OPERATION.
These names given are only a very few of hundreds of cured cases on file in his offices in Milwaukee and are selected because they are people whose gratitude for what the doctor has done for them, prompts them to allow him to refer to them.
Ladies suffering from troubles peculiar to their sex should by all means secure the doctor's advice. ALL MATTERS SACREDLY CONFIDENTIAL.
REMEMBER, Dr. Goddard accepts no incurable cases.
Remember, He gives a written legal guarantee to cure in those cases he does accept.
Remember, His charges are within reach of all.

DR. GODDARD
Milwaukee Specialist, will be at the MYERS HOTEL, Janesville, Tuesday, July 16th. And Every 4 Weeks Thereafter. Call or write. Consultation free. Hours, 9 A. M. to 7 P. M.
Address DR. GODDARD, 121 Wisconsin Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

Harvest Time is With Us
With Its Usual Rush and Heat
If you would get through Harvest this year with as little trouble for yourself as possible, get rid of that old Binder and go into the field with a new up-to-the-minute Deering New Ideal Binder.
There is no doubt in the minds of those farmers who have used the Deering in the past that it is the best machine of its class on the market today.
With the many new improvements which are shown on it you cannot afford to be without one of these machines on your farm this year.
In this machine you will find combined, most effectively, all that is best in modern binder construction. This machine is strongly, although lightly, constructed and will give the best service in all kinds of grain and fields. It is easy running, due to its generous equipment of ball and roller bearings and accurately constructed gears. The levers are placed close to the operator. The new elevator construction provides a simplified driving method, greater elevating capacity, floating elevators designed to handle large quantities of grain, and a new device for slackening the elevator canvases. The newly designed breast plate and compressor trip will greatly improve the effectiveness of the binding attachment. The reel drive has been improved and lastly there is that almost human mechanism—the Deering Knotter—never old but always new, and leading all other knotting devices in efficiency. You will make no mistake when you put the Deering New Ideal Binder in your field.
Our Prices Will Convince You That You Should Give Us Your Trade.
Come in and let us show you what we can do for you in the line of Haying and Harvesting machinery.

FOOD FOR SKEPTICS

By JOHN BARTON OXFORD

JUST as the first gray streaks in the sky to the east were heralding the approach of day, the weird, nerve-racking walls, which had sounded intermittently since midnight from the branches of a maple close to the bedroom windows, began again. Scarcely had the first melancholy note shattered the frosty stillness when the back door was opened cautiously, and down the steps came Captain Solomon Beale, the collar of his hastily donned overcoat turned up about his neck and his bare feet thrust into a pair of well-worn carpet slippers.

In one hand he bore a stout gunny-sack; in the other was a saucer of cream, which he balanced gingerly as he tiptoed to the foot of the maple. High up in the branches above his head, a furry oval ball, crouched on one of the spreading limbs, showed him the position of the enemy.

The captain's lips set in grim determination. He held out the saucer of cream in enticing fashion, the while he strove to work something like blandishment into a voice of unusual gruffness.

"Come, kitty, come!" he coaxed, but the black ball above him, possessed, seemingly, of some inkling as to the true inwardness of the captain's sudden hospitality, refused to venture from its retreat. A pair of green eyes stared down at him, as if already they more than half suspected the treachery he was planning.

Captain Beale put down the saucer at the foot of the tree and moved away a few paces. There was a light movement of the branches, the sound of outspread claws upon the bark, and down the trunk came the cat, sniffed suspiciously the contents of the saucer, and then began to lick the cream with a self-satisfied "meow" that was most apparent.

The first expression upon Captain Beale's face was one of surprise.

He took one cautious step forward, and then another. Engrossed in the least before it, the cat paid not the faintest attention to the stealthy approach. It was only when the captain was close beside it, that it condescended to turn its attention from the cream, and then it was too late; for the captain, with an agility surprising in a man of his years, suddenly leaped forward and caught the black body by the nape of the neck.

Vainly did the cat give vent to its outraged feelings; vainly did it struggle to effectively use its teeth and claws. In a trice the captain had thrust it into the gunny-sack, the neck of which he tied with a piece of stout twine.

Panting, but triumphant, he laid the wriggling bundle, from which came the sounds of a lost soul in the deepest woe, upon the ground. He turned to cast a hurried and guilty glance at the windows of the house next door, half expecting to find there numerous protesting witnesses to his perfidy; but the windows of the house next door remained discreetly curtained. Thanking his lucky stars for this deliverance of his enemy into his hands, Captain Beale picked up the sack, bore it into the house, and went up-stairs to array himself somewhat more fully.

It was only too obvious that a man, bearing a bundle of such liveliness as the sack bade fair to be, could never hope to go through the village streets in broad daylight without attracting unpleasant attention to himself. Therefore, as soon as the captain had completed a hurried toilet, he came into the kitchen, took up the sack, and while yet the town was wrapped in slumber, made his way to the water-front, where his schooner, a little craft of some hundred tons, lay at the dock, her cargo of potatoes aboard, all ready to sail with the morning tide.

But even in the half-light of early morning the captain was not without a certain breathless anxiety as he hurried along the silent, deserted streets, the gunny-sack over his shoulder and the cat within it sending out soulful protests every step of the way.

Indeed, it was only when he gained the dock, scrambled aboard the Lucinda, and tossed his burden unceremoniously into the spare stateroom of the little cabin, that he found courage to draw a long breath.

"There, drat ye!" he apostrophized the sack, "squall your insides out now for all I care or for all the good it will do ye! I'll learn ye to come sneakin' round that maple by my bedroom every night I try to stay ashore, keepin' me awake with your infernal yowling! Go on; keep it up now; don't mind me! Have your fun while you can. I callate you've pretty nigh yowled your last yowl, and spit your last spit. I sum, I'd heave you overboard now, if it wasn't for the tide. Board now, if ye want for the tide takin' your door gettin' suspicious that ye've yowled ye. I'll just keep ye trussed up in the bag till we get outside, and then over you go like the wuthless carcass you are. I guess likely next time I stay ashore here in my own house I'll give a little more peace, so far as you are concerned, anyway."

He slammed the door of the spare stateroom, crossed the cabin, and threw himself into his own berth to snatch what sleep he might before it was time to start for Rockville with the cargo.

He was awakened somewhat later by the sound of heavy footsteps on the deck over his head. He arose and went up the companionway to find his two foremast hands, and Joe Blair, his cook, but just come aboard.

"All right, boys," he greeted them cordially. "Glad you got here bright and early. May as well get under way right off. Tide's settin' right for us now. Git breakfast goin' Joe. Look alive there, for'ard. Cast off them lines."

In a few moments the Lucinda was drifting with the tide away from the dock, and presently, with all sail set, she went careening across the bay toward the open sea.

It was after he had eaten one of Joe Blair's excellent breakfasts that Captain Beale's mind returned to the spare stateroom and the sack therein. He arose from the table, and, thrusting his head out of the companionway, mentally noted the school's position. Far away the shore was but a hazy blue line; while just over the post box loomed the gray shaft of the lighthouse on Flat Island. The captain chuckled.

"This is as good as any place," he said himself. "The tide'll keep washin' ashore from here."

He descended to the cabin, opened the stateroom-door, and drew out the sack. With much vocal effort, the unwilling tenant had well-nigh exhausted itself, but as the bag was lifted it summoned sufficient spirit to send up a last wail that would have killed the last spark of pity in the captain's heart, had such a spark existed.

As it was, he stolidly carried the bag to the deck, and looked about for a convenient piece of scrap-iron to serve as sinking weight.

He was intent on his task of securely lashing a piece of spare chain to the neck of the bag when Joe Blair, with a basket of dirty dishes on his arm, came up from the cabin. He spied the captain seated on the bitts forward, and made his way thither.

"What you got to do with that, cap'n?" he demanded.

Captain Beale went on with his work without so much as looking up. "I'm goin' to heave this bag overboard," he said.

"So? What yer got in the bag?"

The contents of the bag answered for itself. There came from its depths a wail of misery that would have melted the heart of an angel. Joe Blair started perceptibly. He set down the basket of dishes and looked accusingly at his superior.

"It's a cat," he said.

Captain Beale bristled. Hard lines appeared about the corners of his mouth.

"Well, what of that?" said he.

"What you goin' to do with that cat?" the cook questioned in a tone that boded trouble.

"Do with it?" the captain snapped. "What do you s'pose? Dyer think I was goin' to use it for a figger-head? I'm goin' to do jest what I told yer I was—heave it overboard."

Joe Blair's brow darkened. He pushed back his collar and scratched his head in doubtful fashion. It was plain he wanted to speak his mind, and yet felt some hesitancy in doing so. He shifted from foot to foot, and looked helplessly at the basket of dishes at his feet.

"Say," he ventured at length, "say, I ain't exactly what you'd call a superstitious man, which ain't sayin' neither, but I ain't got my peculiarities. But I was on a vessel once—the old Starlight, bound for Maracaibo, it was—and they had a cat aboard that took sick, and they heave it overboard, and after that—"

"Yes, yes, I know," the captain interrupted irritably. "You've told me all about that once or twice before. There ain't nothin' like that goin' to happen this time. This ain't the ship's cat. It's one I fetched aboard a purpose to drown."

"It don't make no difference," the cook maintained dogmatically. "The luck to heave a cat over, no matter where it came from, nor how it got aboard. Say, what color is it?"

"Black," said the captain with incautious truth.

Joe Blair fairly gasped. "Black!" he cried. "Say, you don't mean you'd heave a black cat overboard, do ye?"

"I ain't so terrible partial as to colors," was the captain's sardonic response.

"Don't you go to heavin' no black cats off'n this schooner!" the cook said in a shaking voice.

Beale stiffened. "Se here, you blasted grease-skimmer," he belowed, "I'm cap'n of this craft. You want to remember that. I shall most probably do about as I'm mind to, and that blasted cat is goin' over—see?"

"If she does," the cook threatened, "I'll git out of this schooner—see? I don't. I'll git out of her as soon as we git to Rockville—if we ever do," he ended gloomily.

The threat struck Captain Beale in a vulnerable spot. The one boast of his otherwise modest nature was the superiority of his cook. All too well he remembered the galley regime before Joe Blair had shipped with him. All too well he pictured the soggy biscuits and the greasy hash of Joe's predecessor. What mattered the cat's presence for a few days, and he could manage to take the best ashore when they arrived at Rockville and lose it somewhere. The main thing was to get rid of it. Where or how were secondary considerations. Therefore Captain Beale unbent.

"Well, if you're so terribly touchy about it, take the critter into the galley, then," he commanded, "and keep her there out of my sight until we git to Rockville."

"I tell ye I ain't what you'd call a superstitious man," the cook reiterated, "but you'd got into some kind of a scrape if you'd drowned her."

He picked up the sack and slouched off toward the galley. Captain Beale, with a grunt of disgust, as much for his own weakness as for the cook's, stalked aft to the wheel.

It was ideal weather that followed them that trip. The wind held fair and brisk; the fogs, usually prevalent in those waters in the early spring, were conspicuous only by their absence. In the galley Joe Blair made friends with the cat and fed it upon the best the lockers afforded.

"Havin' a good run of it this trip, ain't we, cap'n?" he observed to Beale the third day out, with a grin that angered the captain.

"Couldn't be better as I see," the skipper replied.

"Know what makes it?" the cook questioned, with a meaning jerk of his head. "It's the cat."

Beale said only the propitious weather that Joe Blair ascribed to the cat's presence. When they discovered the old leak, that had caused them more or less trouble the last trip, had stopped, it was the cat—according to Joe. Nothing but the cat saved one of the foremast hands from serious injury when he fell from aloft, and, by something in the nature of a miracle, landed unhurt upon his feet on the deck. Again it was the cat that steered them into a school of pollock, and brought the cook the luck of landing some hundred and fifty pounds of them as he troiled a line astern.

Day by day the cat's benign influence grew apace; and day by day Captain Beale waxed more wroth and disgusted.

"Say, after the luck we've had this trip, I dunno as I should want to go to sea again in this schooner, if the cat won't along," the cook confided, and the remark set Captain Beale to thinking and planning.

Plainly the cat was becoming all too popular. She bade fair to be a permanent fixture unless something was done to shadow her with disrepute. Somehow or other suspicion must be brought to rest on her.

Captain Beale meditated long and deeply. "I don't want to lose such a cook, and I'll be eternally cursed if I'll have a cat aboard," he ruminated.

"I guess likely the best way out of it is to have something unlucky happen while she's aboard. Something unlucky, that's the ticket," he repeated with a chuckle, a plan already beginning to unfold itself to his mind.

Long that evening Captain Beale sat before the little table in the cabin, figuring laboriously.

"She's got to go on the ways before long and have some new plank in her bottom, anyway," he mused, the while a smile of satisfaction wreathed his homely face. He consulted an almanac at his elbow. "Now, if she was to hit Shovel Rip Ledge tomorrow, say about six in the evening, the worst she'd do would be to hang there till high tide, long about nine, and maybe, pound out a plank or two. She might just as well go on the ways this trip as any. That's the ticket; let her pound out a couple of plank while she's hangin' on the ledge—jest enough to git her leakin' so's all hands, includin' the cook, will have to work the pumps for dear life the rest of the way to Rockville, and then let's see what becomes of that cursed cat's reputation. I'll bet they'll leave her over themselves."

To aid the captain in his plan, the next afternoon a gray mist began to rise from the sea. Steadily it thickened, until by five o'clock it was an impenetrable pall. In the bow the fog-horn in the hands of the lookout boomed and bellowed in monotonous fashion, sending out its hollow wail through the dun-colored walls that had closed about them. Captain Beale glanced into the binoculars, headed the schooner a point farther to the southward, and grinned.

Presently by the bitta he could see the lookout straining his ears between the blasts of the horn, evidently listening intently. Full, well the captain knew to what he was listening; for already through the mist he could hear the distant moan of the whistling-buoy, which marks the outer edge of Shovel Rip Ledge.

The sound grew steadily plainer. Captain Beale's grin widened. At last the lookout hailed:

"Whistlin'-buoy dead ahead, sir!"

The skipper made a great pretense of listening. "I don't hear it," he declared, and held his course. The lookout seemed a trifle uneasy. In a moment he was hailing once more:

"There it goes again, sir. Whistlin'-buoy, dead ahead, sir!"

Captain Beale affected a fine scorn. "I don't hear no whistlin'-buoy," he maintained, "but I can hear some old freighter groanin' out there."

The lookout's next hail, which followed almost immediately, was a wild yell, while he tore aft at his best speed.

"Breakers, sir, right under her bow!" he howled. And then the schooner struck.

There was a shock, a jolt, a grinding sound. The little craft shivered from stem to stern. Up the galley companionway came tumbling the cook.

"Lord help us!" he yelled as the familiar groan of the whistling-buoy smote his ears from close quarters. "We've hit Shovel Rip Ledge!"

There was another bump—a series of bumps; the schooner stopped, surged ahead, then stopped again. Then the grinding beneath her keel began once more; slowly she forged ahead. They could plainly hear the surge under her bows.

"Judas Priest!" shouted the amazed skipper. "What do you make of that? Dummied if we hadn't hit Shovel Rip Ledge, and gone clean over it! Start the pumps, quick!"

In a trice the pumps were shrieking their protests.

"How much water's she takin'?" the skipper demanded.

"Not a drop, sir," the men at the pumps answered.

Captain Beale wiped his forehead. For a time he stood staring stupidly at the binocular before him, but the schooner back on her course.

Then the cook came running aft with a black, furry body in his arms.

"Say, will you believe it now?" he shouted. "Ain't there somethin' in it? Would you ever got off'n that ledge, much more gone over it, if it hadn't been for the cat? Ain't it a special providence you fetched her? I'll tell ye one thing, I ain't goin' to sea again in this schooner, nor no other, without a black cat aboard."

The skipper burst into a great roar of laughter, which left the cook staring at him in open-mouthed wonder.

"You win," said Captain Beale, when he had somewhat recovered his breath. "I'm most beginnin' to think myself there's somethin' in it. That cat stays aboard."

Trick Didn't Work Out.
A Castleford, Yorkshire, England, claimant to an old-age pension produced a prayer book the other day, with his name entered on it as having been born in 1839. The ink used, however, was composed of a dye not invented till 1867, and instead of a pension the claimant got 14 days for attemped fraud.

Professions Taught Free of Charge.
There is just one country in the world where the highest education is free and that country, surprising as it may seem to those who read this, is Chile. There every profession is taught in the most modern methods by the best authorities with no charge whatever to natives.

In these days of high cost of living, a medicine that gets a man up out of bed and able to work in a few days is a safe and valuable remedy. John Heath, Michigan Bar, Cal., says: "I had kidney and bladder trouble for nearly six years, and was confined to my bed, unable to turn without help. Soon after I commenced using Foley Kidney Pills and was relieved at once. His example is worth following. Foley Kidney Pills will do for others just as much as they have done for John Heath. Try them. Badger Drug Co."

The Three Guardsmen

... By ...

ALEXANDRE DUMAS

"Exactly the man—wounded, moreover, in the shoulder?"

"Just so. Well, monsieur, he is still here!"

"Ah, my dear dame," said D'Artagnan, springing from his horse and throwing the bridle to Planchet, "you restore me to life! Where is this dear Aramis? Let me embrace him! I am quite anxious to see him again."

"I beg your pardon, monsieur, but I doubt whether he can see you at this moment. He is with the cure of Montdidier and the superior of the Jesuits of Amiens. After his illness grace touched him, and he determined to enter into orders. Is monsieur still anxious to see him?"

"More so than ever."

"Well, monsieur has only to take the right hand staircase in the yard and knock at No. 5, on the second floor."

D'Artagnan walked quickly in the direction pointed out and mounted one of those exterior staircases that are still to be seen in the yards of our old fashioned mans. The door opened and D'Artagnan penetrated into the chamber.

Aramis, in a black gown, his head enveloped in a sort of round, flat cap, was seated before an oblong table, covered with rolls of paper and enormous volumes in folio. At his right hand was placed the superior of the Jesuits, and on his left the cure of Montdidier. The curtains were half drawn.

At the noise made by D'Artagnan on entering Aramis lifted up his head and beheld his friend. But to the great astonishment of the young man, the sight of him did not produce much effect upon the musketeer, so completely was his mind detached from the things of this world.

"Good day to you, dear D'Artagnan. Believe me, I am very glad to see you."

"So am I delighted to see you," said D'Artagnan, "but I disturb you, perhaps, my dear Aramis," continued D'Artagnan, "for by what I see I am led to believe you are confessing to these gentlemen."

Aramis colored imperceptibly.

"You disturb me! Oh, quite the contrary, dear friend, I swear. And as a proof of what I say, permit me to declare I am rejoiced to see you safe and sound."

"Ah, he'll come round," thought D'Artagnan, "that's not bad."

"For this gentleman, who is my friend, has just escaped from a serious danger," continued Aramis, withunction, pointing to D'Artagnan with his hand and addressing the two ecclesiastics. "You arrive very apropos, D'Artagnan, and by taking part in our discussion may assist us with your intelligence. M. le Principal of Amiens, M. le Cure of Montdidier, and I are arguing upon certain theological questions with which we have been much interested."

"Work slowly," said the cure. "We leave you in an excellent tone of mind until tomorrow."

"Yes; the ground is all sown," said the Jesuit. "You promise to become one of the lights of the church."

Aramis conducted them to the foot of the stairs and then immediately came up again to D'Artagnan.

"You see," said he, "that I am returned to my original ideas. These plans of retreat have been formed for a long time. You have often heard me speak of them, have you not, my friend?"

"Yes, but I must confess that I always thought you were joking. But I have eaten nothing since 10 o'clock this morning, and I am hungry."

"We will dine directly, my friend, only you must please to remember that this is Friday. Now, on such a day I cannot eat meat or see it eaten. If you can be satisfied with my dinner, it consists of cooked spinach and fruits. On your account I will add some eggs, and that is a serious infraction of the rule, for eggs are meat, since they engender chickens."

"And so, Aramis, you are decidedly going into the church? What will our two friends say? What will M. de Tréville say? They will treat you as a deserter, I warn you."

"I do not enter the church; I re-enter it. I deserted the church for the world, for you know that I committed violence upon myself when I became a musketeer."

"Who—? I know nothing about it."

"You don't know how I quitted the seminary?"

"Not at all."

"This is my history then." And Aramis told D'Artagnan how he had been compelled to leave the theological seminary after killing a man in a duel fought about a woman. He continued:

"Athos, whose acquaintance I made about that period, and Porthos, who had taught me some effective tricks of fence, prevailed upon me to solicit the uniform of a musketeer. The king entertained great regard for my father, who had fallen at the siege of Arras, and the uniform was granted. You may understand that the moment is arrived for me to re-enter into the bosom of the church. This wound, my dear D'Artagnan, has been a warning to me from heaven."

"This wound? Bah! It is nearly healed, and I am sure that it is not that which at the present moment gives you the most pain."

"What do you think it is, then?" said Aramis, blushing.

"You have one in your heart, Aramis, one deeper and more painful, a wound made by a woman."

The eye of Aramis kindled in spite of himself.

"Ah," said he, dissembling his emotion under a feigned carelessness, "according to your idea, then, my brain is turned! And for whom—for some one with whom I have trifled in some garison? No!"

"I crave your pardon, my dear Aramis, but I thought you aimed higher."

"Higher? And who am I to nourish such ambition? A poor musketeer, a beggar and unknown who hates slavery and finds himself ill placed in the world."

"Alas, my dear Aramis," said D'Artagnan, in his turn heaving a profound sigh.

"A woman whom I love, whom I adore, has just been torn from me by force. I do not know where she is; I have no means of ascertaining where she has been taken to. She is perhaps a prisoner; she is perhaps dead!"

"Yes, but you have at least this consolation, that you can say to yourself she has not quitted you voluntarily, while I—"

"While what?"

"Nothing," replied Aramis, "nothing."

"So you renounce the world, then, forever; that is a settled thing; a resolution decreed?"

"Forever! You are my friend today, tomorrow you will be no more to me than a shadow, or, rather, even you will no longer exist for me. As for the world, it is a sepulcher and nothing else."

"Well, then, let us say no more about it," said D'Artagnan, "and let us burn this letter, which, no doubt, announces to you some fresh infidelity of your servant maid."

"What letter?" cried Aramis eagerly.

"A letter which was sent to your abode in your absence and which was given to me for you."

"But from whom is that letter?"

"Oh, from some heartbroken waiting woman of Mme. de Chevreuse, perhaps, who was obliged to return to Tours with her mistress and who in order to appear smart and attractive, stole some perfumed paper and sealed her letter with a duchess's coronet."

"What do you say?"

"Well, I really think I must have lost it," said the young man maliciously, while pretending to search for it.

"D'Artagnan, D'Artagnan," cried Aramis, "you are killing me!"

"Well, here it is at last!" said D'Artagnan as he drew the letter from his pocket.

Aramis sprang toward him, seized the letter, read it, or, rather, devoured it, his countenance absolutely beaming with delight.

"Thanks, D'Artagnan, thanks!" cried he, almost in a state of delirium.

"She was forced to return to Tours. She is not faithless; she still loves me! Dear friend, let me embrace you! Happiness almost stifles me!"

At that moment Bazin entered with the spinach and the omelette.

"Be off, you scoundrel!" cried Aramis, throwing his cap in his face.

"Order a larded hare, a fat capon and four bottles of the best Burgundy! Let us drink, my dear D'Artagnan, and while we do so tell me something about what is doing in the world yonder."

CHAPTER XXI.

The Wife of Athos.

"WELL, we have now to search for Athos," said D'Artagnan to the vivacious Aramis when he had informed him of all that had passed since their departure from the capital and a good dinner had made one of them forget his theology and the other his fatigue.

"Do you think, then, that any harm can have happened to him?" asked Aramis. "Athos is so cool, so brave and handles his sword so skillfully."

"There is no doubt of all that. But I fear lest Athos should have been beaten down by a mob of serving men. This is my reason for wishing to set out again as soon as I possibly can."

"I will try to accompany you," said Aramis, "though I scarcely feel in condition to mount on horseback. When do you mean to set out?"

"Tomorrow at daybreak."

"Till tomorrow, then," said Aramis, "for, iron nerved as you are, you must stand in need of repose."

The next morning when D'Artagnan entered Aramis' chamber he found him standing at the window.

"What are you looking at there?" asked D'Artagnan.

"I am admiring three magnificent horses which the stable lads are leading about. It would be a pleasure worthy of a prince to travel upon such horses."

"Well, my dear Aramis, you may enjoy that pleasure, for one of those three horses is yours, with its caparison."

"What, those rich bolsters, that velvet housing, that saddle studded with silver, are they all mine? Why, it must have been the king who made you such a present."

"To a certainty it was not the cardinal, but be satisfied that one of them is your property."

"I choose that which the red headed boy is leading."

"Have it, then."

"That is enough to drive away all my pains. I could ride upon him with thirty balls in my body. What handsome stirrups! Hola! Bazin, come here this minute!"

The two young men and the lackey went down into the yard.

"Hold my stirrup, Bazin," cried Aramis.

And Aramis sprang into his saddle with his usual grace and lightness, but after a few vaults and curves of the noble animal his rider felt his pains come on so insupportably that he turned pale and became unsteady in his seat. D'Artagnan caught him in his arms and assisted him to his chamber.

"That's well, my dear Aramis; take care of yourself," said he. "I will go alone in search of Athos."

"You are a man of brass," replied Aramis.

"No; I have good luck, that is all. But how do you mean to pass your time till I come back? No more theology!"

They took leave of each other and in ten minutes, after commending his friend to the cares of the hostess and Bazin, D'Artagnan was trotting along in the direction of Amiens.

How was he going to find Athos, even should he find him at all? The position in which he had left him was critical. He might very probably have succumbed. This idea, while darkening his brow, drew several sighs from him and caused him to formulate to himself a few vows of vengeance. Of all his friends Athos was the eldest and the least resembling him in appearance, in his tastes and sympathies. And yet he entertained a marked preference for this gentleman. The noble and distinguished air of Athos, those flashes of greatness which from time to time broke out from the shade in which he voluntarily kept himself, that unalterable equality of temper which made him the most pleasant companion in the world, that forced gaiety, that bravery which might have been termed blind if it had not been the result of the rarest coolness—such qualities attracted more than the esteem, more than the friendship, of D'Artagnan; they attracted his admiration.

"Well," thought D'Artagnan, "poor Athos is perhaps at this moment dead, and dead by my fault, for it was I who dragged him into this affair."

And these thoughts redoubled the eagerness of D'Artagnan, who excited his horse, which stood in need of no excitement, and they proceeded at a rapid pace. About 11 o'clock in the morning they perceived Amiens, and at half past 11 they were at the door of the inn.

D'Artagnan had often meditated against the perfidious host one of those hearty vengeance which offer consolation while being hoped for. He entered the hostelry with his hat pulled over his eyes, his left hand on the pommel of the sword, and cracking his whip with his right hand.

Days When Two Big Shows Combined For Formal Opening In New York

By
D. W. WATT

Who has not visited the tented city that makes its annual pilgrimage to your community and wondered how so much disorder is really the means for such order and discipline. The circus arrives in the early morning hours from its last stand and even before the average citizen is awake, the "big top" has been staked out for the "big top," the cook tent up in place, the dining hall almost ready to serve breakfast to the swarms of workmen and the side show canvas is spread waiting to be put up.

All is seeming confusion yet out of it all comes order. The tents up, the big parade follows, then the dinner for the performers and workers and meanwhile side shows are doing a booming business while the crowds begin to filter into the menagerie tent to look at the curious animals of the world transported to the city for one day only. Keepers are on hand to watch against accidents.

It takes a master hand to control all these affairs. A man with ability to plan months in advance for all this army of men, these curiosities and the amusement features of the show. It needs careful planning to route a circus and also to arrange for its transportation facilities. The expenses are tremendous and consequently the receipts must be large and if there is competition with other shows it means much.

Each manager and show owner always bills his show as the greatest, the biggest and most attractive in the amusement field. Today the Ringlings practically control the circus world. True they have competition but with their two big shows and the other smaller ones they are interested in, they have a practical monopoly on the business. In days gone by however, the two big shows of the country were the P. T. Barnum outfit and the Adam Forepaugh show.

In the season of '87 they combined for their opening in Madison Square Garden New York. It was a great event in the circus world and one which old showmen still delight in talking over. The two biggest shows in the country made a peace with each other divided territory and then opened together in the biggest amusement hall in the United States at that time.

It was the most notable affair and men from all the country came to New York to witness the combined parade and performance and learn some of the secrets of the success of these two show kings of their day. Adam Forepaugh was one of the hardest working heads of a big show there was. Summer and winter he labored taking but little rest. Those who ever knew him remember his apparent custom of apparently enjoying the crowds and doing nothing but it was behind the scenes that he worked and planned and it was only the finished product that he saw.

This season of '87 was a most notable one. The Forepaugh show was at zenith of its glory and had novel features that even today are seen in the circus ring. Part of the old Adam Forepaugh herd of trained elephants still can be found doing their wonderful dancing in the sawdust arena under the big top, advertised as much of a feature as when they appeared in Madison Square Garden and delighted the public there.

Mr. Watt was one of the treasurers of the combined show in New York and his story of the year, of the biggest parade, biggest show that was ever seen is interesting and instructive.

The season of '87 is remembered especially by circus people as one of the greatest in the show business. That season the two greatest shows in the United States, the Barnum and the Forepaugh circuses consolidated for eight weeks in Madison Square Garden, New York city, opening on the 6th of March.

The two monster shows gave a torchlight parade on Saturday night, preceding the opening, which left Madison Square Garden at 5:30 and marched continuously returning at 11:15. This parade was nearly if not quite two miles long, there were fourteen bands of music, 56 elephants and all the cages and paraphernalia belonging to both the great shows and this was certainly the greatest circus parade ever put out.

Madison Square Garden held practically 10,000 people. There were 200 boxes each containing six chairs and many times during the engagement thousands of people were turned away. Many people during this engagement occupied these boxes that were famous the world over. The Vanderbilts and the Astors occupied boxes there at different times and Mrs. Frank Leslie of Leslie's Magazine had a box for two weeks for herself and friends. The advance sale for this engagement opened ten days ahead and on the day the show opened the box receipts showed an advance sale of a little over $33,000.

The rent for the garden for the eight weeks engagement was $20,000 and to remodel the seating capacity cost practically $5,000 more. But while the rent and cost of remodeling was high the receipts were enormous and New York city always started a show out with a big bank roll.

The show opened Monday afternoon and Monday evening when I went into the main office to make a final settlement for the day there were congregated nearly all the circus owners of the United States. As I stepped into the office, P. T. Barnum said to me "David, it looks as though all the boys were here except your old friend Burr Robbins."

There was Adam Forepaugh, sole owner of the Forepaugh show, P. T. Barnum, James A. Bailey, James E. Cooper and James Hutchinson, all equal owners in the Barnum show. There was Eph, Adam and Peter Sells of the Sells Brothers and W. W. Cole of the Cole show, Frank A. Robbins of the Robbins show, Jerry Ferguson a partner of the Van Amburg show, Egert and Willis Howe, of Howe's Great London and many others of lesser note, all there to see the truly greatest show on earth. These men had all made themselves famous the world over as entertainers in this particular line and many of them had made and lost fortunes in the business.

Madison Square Garden in those days was the largest building of its kind in the United States, having two entrances one on Fourth avenue and one on Madison avenue. Over these two entrances were stationed the two bands which played alternately. In the great dressing rooms there were over 450 performers and it was this engagement that the famous eight elephants first appeared before a New York audience and danced the quadrille and they made the greatest hit of any act during the engagement. While this was an expensive show to run, the box office receipts were the largest ever known for any eight weeks engagement.

After this engagement closed the Barnum show went to Brooklyn and the Adam Forepaugh show to Philadelphia where they showed two weeks. A few days after leaving Philadelphia, Mrs. Frank Leslie came on to the show with a sketch artist and sketched many of the famous acts of the show which appeared later in Frank Leslie's Magazine.

This season we zig-zagged the eastern country taking all the larger cities and at Fall River, Mass., which is the famous factory town, we turned away people afternoon and night. This was the largest one day's receipts of the year.

About the middle of August we went into Canada at Prescott and showed in the province about four weeks, crossing back into the states at Niagara Falls. From here we turned and came west into Ohio and later closed the season at Alliance on the 5th of November and from here shipped home to Philadelphia to winter quarters.

But the busy life of Adam Forepaugh did not close when the show closed. His winter quarters in Philadelphia occupied two blocks. Everything including cars, cages and everything were run into these winter quarters and immediately from 65 to 75 men were put to work building new cars, new cages and wagons of all kinds and repairing others for the coming season.

Mr. Forepaugh was always there at 7 o'clock in the morning every day in the winter to see that everything was started on time, so that his life was busy in the winter quarters as well as in the summer.

WM. BARNES TO HELP TAFT RUN CAMPAIGN

Wm. F. Barnes.

A not frequent visitor at the White House these days is William F. Barnes, Republican boss of New York, arch enemy of Roosevelt and close political friend of Taft. The president is well pleased with the work Barnes has done for him in the last few months, and wants to draft the New Yorker into the service as a general in the presidential campaign. Barnes will at least direct the fight for Mr. Taft in New York.

Self-Satisfaction.

Some men are satisfied with themselves merely, because they are poor judges of character.

Govs. Stubbs, Deneen, and Hadley.

If Col. Roosevelt can show that he is a winner, he can count on the support of governors and senators who are now perched on the fence, undecided what to do. If he fails to develop strength, they will abide safely within the Republican party. Hadley and Deneen are supposed to be against the third party plan, but they have recently shown signs of sticking around to see what will happen. Gov. Stubbs is for Roosevelt, all right, but he hopes the Republican party of Kansas can be turned to T. R.'s support, so that no third party will be necessary in his state.

Value of the Nile.
The Nile is one of the longest rivers in the world, but it is not especially valuable as a navigable stream. Its chief benefit to the country is from the immense deposits of mud carried down in the annual floods and which have made the region overflowed one of the most fertile in the world.

In Holland where qualified women have long had municipal suffrage, the committee on revision of the constitution has reported in favor of giving women proportional representation and making them eligible to parliament.

Overland

A Practical Comparison

This Forty-Five Horsepower Touring Car $1500; Equipped with Self-Starter Only $20 Extra

EVERY man likes to make every dollar he spends go as far as possible. He won't exchange it for seventy-five cents worth of merchandise, from one man, if another offers him an even dollar's worth for a dollar. Ten cent soap is worth ten cents—not fifteen.

Any automobile manufacturer can talk to you in a general way about the unheard of value his car represents. But general statements do not count for very much. The are meaningless. They prove nothing.

While most of the advertising writers are trying to get your attention by flat, general, misleading statements in an effort to cover up the high prices on their cars, we want to talk to you on the sane and practical comparative basis of facts and figures.

When we make the claim that our big forty-five horsepower five-passenger touring car at $1500 is the equal of any $2000 car on the market, we can prove this to be an actual fact. The better you are acquainted with automobile conditions, cars, prices, specifications, etc.; in fact, the more you will realize this to be true.

What do cars of this type usually sell for? You find them for $1700, $1750, $1800 and $2000 and some higher. But why should you pay the higher price? You will find these higher priced cars are no better—no larger—no more powerful—no more comfortable, than this car for $1500. So why pay more? You will find the motor no larger—the seating capacity no greater—the finish and appointments no finer. So, if you get no more, why on earth should you pay any more?

How can you make a car of this size and power to sell for $1500 when other makers get $2000, and more, for cars that are almost identical?—you ask.

It is possible for the very practical reason that we are the largest automobile producers in the business. We make 25,000 cars where the average standard maker produces but 5,000 and less. Having five times the manufacturing facilities, we are actually able to produce an automobile at from twenty to thirty per cent less cost. And this difference is found in our price to you.

So much for figures. Now, let's get down to the specifications, for the specifications represent the real intrinsic value of any automobile. This car has a powerful forty-five horsepower motor; the wheel base is one hundred and fifteen inches, the transmission is selective, three speeds and reverse, fitted with the F & S annular bearings, which are used on the most expensive cars in the world. The gear and crank casings are of pure aluminum. The control is in the center. The front axle is a drop forged I-section fitted with the finest Timken bearings. The rear axle is full floating, also fitted with Timkens. The frame is of pressed steel with a double drop. Tires are 34x4. It is equipped with a Bosch magneto. Body is of dark Brewster green, ivory striped. All of the bright parts are heavily nickel plated. Lamps are finished in black enamel and nickel. If you wish, we will equip this car with a self-starting system for only $20 additional. Our starter is the simplest and safest on the market. It starts the car ninety-nine times out of a hundred and a child can work it.

This brief synopsis of the specifications gives you the main facts covering this $1500 car. A car of any other make, with like specifications, cannot be found for less than $2000.

Right now the Overland is outselling any other similar car in the world. Would this be possible if we did not give more car, and a better car, for less money than any other maker in the industry?

By all means see this car before you buy. It surely should not take much to convince you that the purchase of a car for $1500 which generally sells for $2000 is good business. And we can prove by a point for point comparison that our $1500 car is the part for part equal of any $2000 car in America. It will give you the comfort, speed, power, seating capacity, service and wear.
